

Catena Family History

100 Years of Elevating Argentine Wine

BODEGA CATENA ZAPATA

Mendoza - Argentina

My great-grandfather, Nicola Catena, was a dreamer and a risk-taker. Sailing from Italy in 1898 in search of a new opportunity, he reached the rolling hills of Mendoza, Argentina and felt he had found the Promised Land. In 1902, he fulfilled his dream by planting his first Malbec vineyard and establishing a family winery that has been passed down through four generations.

Under the leadership of my father, Nicolas Catena Zapata, the winery experienced its First Revolution. Inspired by what he saw at the wineries in Napa in the early 1980s, my father returned to Argentina determined to make Cabernet Sauvignon and Chardonnay that could rival the best in the world. By turning his attention to vineyard management and winemaking techniques, my father changed the course of Argentinian wine. His passion and bold vision led to the 1997 vintage of Nicolas Catena Zapata, a Cabernet-Malbec blend that stood supreme with the best wines of the time in blind tastings around the world.

My great-grandfather planted Malbec because he believed Argentina would provide the sun and the soil the grape needed to once again thrive. My father shared that vision, but he still felt Malbec had yet to reach its full potential. Despite all those who told him he was crazy, he selected land at almost 5,000 feet and planted what is now known as Adrianna Vineyard. He believed—and was right—that a vineyard at this altitude would elevate the tannins and produce wines that had power, texture, and richness unlike any other in Mendoza. This “daring move” has become his Second Revolution.

I joined my father in 1995, committed to his dream of “Grand Cru or nothing.” With my background in science and a need to better understand the terroir of our vineyards, I formed the Catena Institute of Wine. With a clear vision in mind, I led the team to identify the unique parcels within Adrianna Vineyard and fine-tune the way each individual vine is treated. The results speak for themselves: five award-winning, outstanding wines that represent not only the best in Argentina but some of the best in the world. And it showed to my father that I, too, could create a ‘Revolution’.

CATENA ZAPATA | NICOLAS CATENA ZAPATA

The inaugural 1997 vintage of this Cabernet Sauvignon and Malbec blend set a new standard of quality for wines from South America when it won a series of blind tastings against other prestigious cuvées from around the world.

Nicolás Catena Zapata is made from a plant-by-plant selection of historic rows in the Catena Zapata vineyards. The wine is made from over 200 separate microvinifications representing different rows, altitudes, and harvest times. The wine is aged in French oak barrels for 24 months and an additional 24 months in the bottle before release. It is only produced in outstanding vintage years.

Tasting Note:

Nicolás Catena Zapata has an intense dark violet color with blue-black tones. A complex wine with delicate aromas of black cherry and licorice, it is enlivened by minerals, violet, spice, and herbs. The palate is sharply delineated and impressively concentrated, with a serious backbone supporting its very fresh currant and mineral flavors.

Decanter Man of the Year 2009 – Nicolás Catena Zapata

"While its seat at the top table of wine producing countries is now secure, Argentina has one man above all to thank for its elevation. Nicolás Catena became the leading architect of his country's transformation to quality wine exporter."

"Nicolás Catena Zapata is justly credited with putting Argentinean Wines on the world map – by the best expedient of focusing entirely on quality"

- Jancis Robinson, MW

"Argentina's leap in quality arrived in the 1990's when Argentine wine producer Nicolás Catena Zapata, through rigorous experimentation, decides to plant vineyards at high altitude and develops a selection of Malbec clones...And it is at this point that the history of Argentina and Malbec come together. The result is a unique story with a most favorable ending: the wine of Nicolás Catena earns a place in wine lists around the world and other producers follow his example."

- Gambero Rosso, Italia, October 2012

"Nicolás Catena Zapata is a man of vision, of high intellect, always curious about others and about how the world is developing. He has been instrumental in changing the Argentinian wine scene more than anybody else, pushing it towards high quality and intelligent marketing."

- Baron Eric de Rothschild, Domaines Barons de Rothschild [Lafite].
